PICKING APPLE TREE TWICE

Thinning at First Tends to Bring About Increase in Fruit Remaining on Trees.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture )

Most apple grovers remove all the fruit from the trees at one picking. Many, however, according to observations of the United States Department of Agriculture, make two or more pickings during the season, especially when the fruit is not uniformly of good color, but is otherwise of high quality. The advisability of making more than one picking depends upon the extent to which the size and color of the fruit are affected by the quantity borne by each tree.

The apples on the outside of the tree, especially the larger and bettercolored ones, are removed at the first picking to permit the limbs to lift and expose the uncolored fruit to the sun. This thinning also tends to bring about an increase in size of the fruit remaining on the trees. In the course of a week or ten days the second picking is made, when the remainder of the crop usually is removed. In a few instances more than two pickings are made, especially with early apples. Two pickings are more expensive than one because of the additional time required, though the increase in the market value of the crop often justifies this practice. If the crop is of low quality the value of the returns usually are not sufficient to warrant the extra cost of more than one pick-

SET FRUIT TREES IN AUTUMN

Make Plans to Have Few Good Varieties, and Select Those That Ripen in Succession.

Make your plans to set fruit trees as soon as the autumn days come, where the foliage has been cast and the ground is moist and well prepared. This should be done before the busy spring days, when farmers have so great demand upon their time. Make plans to set a few good varieties of fruits and select those that ripen in succession, to supply the family with fresh fruit most of the season.

When a Federal Bureau reminds you that children should not drink coffee or tea-why not think of your own health?

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among the Nation's school children, the warning that children should not drink coffee or tea.

The reason is well known. Coffee and tea contain drugs which stimulate and often overexcite the nerves, and so upset health.

The harm is by no means confined to children, as any doctor can tell you.

If health is valuable to childhood, it is valuable always. If harm to health should be avoided until bodies grow up, is it worth taking a chance with health when bodies have grown up?

You can have that delicious and satisfying cereal beverage, Postum, with any meal, and be safe—you, and the children, too. There's charm without harm in Postum.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Gereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

The road to health is a good road for anybody to follow
